Welcome to Forillon National Park

ocated at the eastern tip of the Gaspé Peninsula, Forillon National Park is characterized by its majestic landscape of mountains, cliffs and sea. It was created in 1970 to preserve an exceptional environment, representative of our Canadian heritage – the Notre Dame and Mégantic mountains. Its natural characteristics, including the geology, topography, flora, land and marine wildlife, and the human presence, led to this area being included in Canada's network of national parks.

Covering 244 km², Forillon is one of Canada's smallest national parks. Its natural, cultural and historical riches are easily revealed to visitors who take part in the many recreational and educational activities organized throughout the season.

We invite you to consult this guide, which has been prepared just for you. It includes a description of the activities and services provided, the fees and regulations in effect and a map of the park. This year, for the first time, this guide also contains a detailed program of the activities and services provided during the fall.

La Vieille, Cap-Gaspé

What does the toponym "Forillon" mean?

The term Forillon was used as early as 1534 by Jacques Cartier in the accounts of his voyages to Canada. Champlain also mentions it in a text dating from 1626: "...one league from the cape of Gaspey is a small rock they call the farillon, separated from the mainland by an outcrop of stone..."

The word forillon thus appears to denote a small, rocky island standing erect. But the exact location of this forillon remains uncertain. It may have been the rocky outcrop at the tip of the Gaspé promontory, which map-makers called "La Vieille", or the other rock (no longer standing) one league from Cape Gaspé, described by Champlain. In any case, the name FORILLON is now associated with the peninsula boasting the splendid national park that proudly bears the same name.

The Jacques Cartier Monument, a place to discover n July 24, 1534, Jacques Cartier took possession of Canada on behalf of the King of France by erecting a cross on the shore of Gaspé Bay. To commemorate this historic event, Parks Canada commissioned a monument composed of six majestic cast-iron stelae, the work of Saint-Jean-Port-Joli's Bourgault-Legros family of sculptors.

An eloquent concept, the Jacques Cartier monument speaks not only through the texts inscribed on the stelae, but also through their bas-reliefs and even their very shape. In fact, the form of the stelae brings to mind the standing stones of the explorer's Brittany homeland, and the wave-worn pebbles of Gaspé Peninsula beaches. The bas-reliefs evoke the principal episodes of the historic encounter between Europeans and Native Americans. As for the texts, drawn from Cartier's written accounts, they enlighten us as to the significance of this event that would earn for Gaspé the title, "Cradle of Canada".

The monument is located in a magnificent setting on Jacques Cartier Point in downtown Gaspé. In addition to the monument, visitors can explore an exhibit dedicated to Cartier's first voyage, stroll along a boardwalk showcasing local history or attend evening concerts at the outdoor amphitheatre.

Ecological and commemorative integrity uring your next visit to one of Canada's natural parks or national historic sites, you will no doubt hear about ecological and commemorative integrity. This refers to our commitment to step up efforts to conserve and protect our heritage, and to do so in a perspective that extends beyond park boundaries. In this way, we wish to increase our efforts to raise awareness about the merits and pertinence of protecting the natural and historic environment on a larger scale, and to work in partnership with people and organizations who are concerned by these issues.

Park visitors who already appreciate the value of this heritage are, in this respect, privileged witnesses, and associates in the implementation of these new provisions. They can make a major contribution to the success of this program by playing the role of advocates for the defence and protection of both the environment and historic assets.

Your visit to Forillon National Park, the Jacques Cartier Monument in Gaspé, the Battle of the Restigouche National Historic Site in Pointe-à-la-Croix or to Pointe-au-Père Lighthouse National Historic Site is an opportunity to fully understand the value and diversity of this heritage. By taking part in interpretation activities, you will learn more about it and you could provide valuable assistance by helping us in our efforts to ensure ecological and commemorative integrity.

I wish you a pleasant stay in Canada's national park and historic sites in the Gaspé Peninsula. Use your visit to discover all the wealth of these sites, so worthy of sustained protection.

Enjoy your vacation!

By telephone: (418) 368-6050 (May 14 to August 10, 2001 only)

Reservations must be made at least 48 hours before you plan to arrive at the park.

When you book a campsite, we cannot guarantee you a specific site number. We can, however, confirm a site in the campground of your choice and your requested service (with or without electrical hook-ups). Individual sites are attributed when you arrive at the campground.

Reservations will be accepted for stays between June 18 and August 26. There are always plenty of campsites available off-season.

Fees

It costs $5 (non-refundable) to reserve a campsite. Camping fees are $16.50 per night for a site without electricity and $20 for a site with electricity. In addition to these fees, campers must pay park entrance fees (see 2001 fees on page 4).

And for those who haven't booked...

Of the 367 campsites in the park, half are available to those who do not book in advance. These sites are allocated on a first come, first served basis. Unfortunately, campgrounds are often completely full early in the day in July and the first half of August. When this occurs, would-be campers are invited to add their names to a waiting list. Every day at 1 pm in the Interpretation Centre parking lot (North Area), park staff hold a roll-call using this list, and the campsites vacated that morning are allocated to the people whose names are called (names are called in order of listing).

You can also stay at one of the private campgrounds in the region. For more information about where they are located and the services available, please ask a visitor attendant.

In the late 19th and early 20th centuries, Grande-Grave bustled with activity from May to October. Under the far-reaching control of two powerful fishery companies, hundreds of families along the coast and many seasonal workers fished cod, then dried and salted it producing the world-famous "Gaspé Cured", exported to Italy, Spain and the Caribbean.

The aim of Parks Canada's conservation efforts and facilities is to help you discover this chapter of Forillon's human history. The whole family will learn a great deal from the special exhibits, films and experienced guides who accompany you through the carefully restored old buildings.

Scuba diving and snorkelling

The diversity of Forillon's seabed never fails to astonish divers exploring the waters at Petit-Gaspé, Grande-Grave, Anse-Saint-Georges and Anse-aux-Sauvages. In a service building at Grande-Grave, divers can use the lockers and rinse their equipment in the sinks. Services such as diving courses, equipment rental, and compressed air supply are available near the park. Ask Forillon staff about the rules governing this activity.

Trail classification

Easy: Short trail over relatively level terrain.

Intermediate: Medium-length trail, possibly involving going up and down a few slopes. Difficult: A trail over 12 km long that crosses rugged terrain with steep gradients.

The International Appalachian Trail (IAT)

This trails begins at Mount Katahdin in the State of Maine (United States) and ends at Cap-Gaspé in Forillon National Park.

SIA

The Forillon sector of the IAT, 45 km long, crosses the park from west to east along existing park trails.

IAT signage is easy to spot, the blue and white metal markers measure some 5 cm by 15 cm. They are posted on trees along the trail, confirming that you are hiking along a stage of the IAT.

Be careful when hiking

- Check the distance and length of your hike before you leave.
- Wear appropriate footwear for hiking and clothing suitable for the weather and season.
- Take along something to drink because stream water can be unfit for drinking.
- Keep pets leashed at all times.
- Bring back your waste, since there are no waste containers along the trails.

Brochures about the trails and topographical maps can be purchased at park reception centres and toll kiosks.

FORILLON NATIONAL PARK

Help maintain ecological integrity

In March 2000, the National Parks Ecological Integrity Commission presented its evaluation report on the situation of national parks and their efforts to maintain ecological integrity. This commission, composed of independent experts, was mandated to provide a current portrait of conservation challenges and to issue recommendations on how to improve the long-term management of national parks.

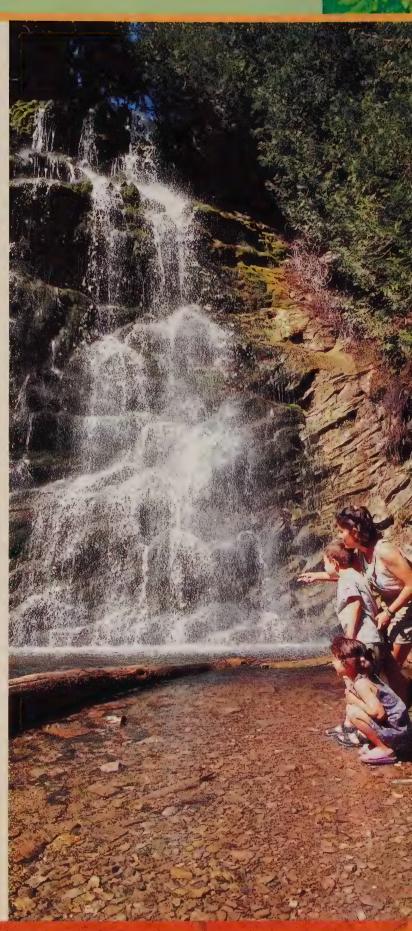

Nature parks, already subject to internal pressures stemming from an ever-increasing number of visitors, are becoming islands of green in a landscape highly disturbed by socio-economic factors such as urbanization, agriculture, forestry exploitation, intensive recreational use of adjoining lands, habitat fragmentation, invasion of non-native species, etc. The way ecosystems within a park function is intimately tied to what happens outside its boundaries. Wildlife populations are often migratory and need natural corridors where they can find refuge and food when they migrate beyond park limits.

In the past, it was believed that to protect an area it would be enough merely to create a national park, confident that its legal status and prohibition of any form of commercial exploitation within the park would settle the matter. In other words, conservation was taken for granted from the moment the park was created. But this is not the case, and we are just beginning to understand the complexity of the ecological interrelations that need to be protected in order to maintain the integrity of parks and their ecosystems.

Inspired by the Ecological Integrity Commission's report, Parks Canada made a formal commitment to act and manage national parks in such a way as to find, and implement, solutions to these problems. To reach this goal, it intends to:

- develop partnerships in research and ecological monitoring to be able to scientifically document the nature of the ecosystems involved and the pressures to which they are subjected, and ensure that any decision regarding the management and use of national parks is founded on scientific information;
- implement adaptive, active management mechanisms that make it possible to adjust the development and use of parks in response to the problems encountered, and restore disturbed ecosystems; and
- integrate the management of park ecosystems within the context of the larger area surrounding the park in order to harmonize the sometimes diverging needs, aspirations and land management methods.

The challenge is enormous. Parks Canada cannot act alone and needs the participation of local communities and the general public. Moreover, people must be aware of the requirements associated with conservation and the appropriate use of national parks, and they must become the true artisans of change by taking part in the decision-making process.

Please help us keep wildlife WILD and ALIVE!

The chance to observe wild animals as they go about their ways in their natural habitat is one of the most fascinating experiences our national parks have to offer.

Along with this opportunity, however, comes the responsibility to treat wild animals with the respect they deserve, and Staying ALIVE...

It's not easy to "make a living" here in the wild. Wildlife must devote all available energy to mere survival: feeding, resting, staying warm or cool enough, avoiding natural dangers, and producing healthy offspring.

Every time we disrupt these natural activities we are, in effect, taking energy away from their survival "bank account". With thousands of people visiting our parks every year, these "withdrawals" can quickly leave the species bank "dead broke".

Staying WILD...

Is there a difference between a wild animal and one in captivity? We can only guess at what the animal might think. But from our perspective - isn't the very thing that makes wild animals so attractive to us, the fact that they are, indeed,

Unfortunately, when animals become used to being around people, they face the danger of losing that very thing that makes them unique, their wildness.

How can we keep park wildlife WILD and ALIVE?

The National Parks Act expressly prohibits feeding or harassing wildlife. However, visitors sometimes commit "unintentional" acts that modify the behaviour of animals, either attracting them or making them flee.

You can do your part:

- by making sure you have properly put away your food so that animals can neither smell nor reach it, for example, by placing it in the trunk of your vehicle or in another protected place;
- by using the "bear-proof" waste containers placed in picnic areas and campgrounds for your use;
- by complying with these DOs.

DOs:

DO: Be a discrete observer...

Find a comfortable, safe spot, and just sit quietly and observe. Watch how creatures interact with each other and observe their habitat. You'll be amazed at what nature will reveal!

DO: Act small...

Resist that impulse to get close, reach out, or call out to wildlife. Use binoculars and a telephoto lens. Your best chance of observing truly wild nature is to make as small an impact as possible.

DO: ...and stay safe.

Retreat immediately if an animal approaches you or shows any sign of aggressiveness.

DO: See small.

The big creatures get all the press, but there just aren't that many of them out there. It's more rewarding to look for the smaller ones. Interest - like beauty - is largely in the eye of the beholder.

DO: Think big.

While observing the activity at an ant's nest, for example, contemplate the ant's role in the bigger picture - as a model of society, perhaps, or as an important source of food for other forest inhabitants.

DO: Intrude less.

Animals are not always visible. If you have not managed to see any during your stay, buy postcards with pictures of them, and tell your friends about the seals you heard or the bear tracks you saw.

DO: Keep on learning.

Join a Parks Canada interpretive program, read one of the many books about nature in the parks. Indulge your curiosity!

Great Blue Heron

If you see a bear beside the road or on a trail, keep this in mind:

It may run onto the road.

At any time, anywhere. And especially if there are people stopping to watch it, getting out of their cars, approaching too closely. In the past 5 years, 3 bears and many other animals have been killed on roads in Forillon National Park.

It is stronger and faster than you are.

It may look "docile", but a bear that appears unconcerned about your presence is the one you should fear the most. It's obviously not afraid of you, and it could be getting a bit bothered by all the people who keep disturbing it – all day long, day after day...

It is likely eating or looking for food.

Bears have to eat almost constantly during the snow-free months to accumulate enough energy to survive their long winter hibernation. Being able to feed undisturbed may make the difference between life or death for that bear or, if it's a female, for her offspring. Though she may have successfully mated in the spring, she will only be able to carry her young to term it she builds up enough body fat over the summer.

It could be a female.

In this harsh environment, it takes a female black bear three to four years to reach breeding age, and her cubs will stay with her for two years. This means she may only produce three litters of offspring in her lifetime – a very low reproductive rate. The unnatural loss of any individual, especially a female, is therefore a serious threat to the long-term survival of the population.

It could be an adolescent.

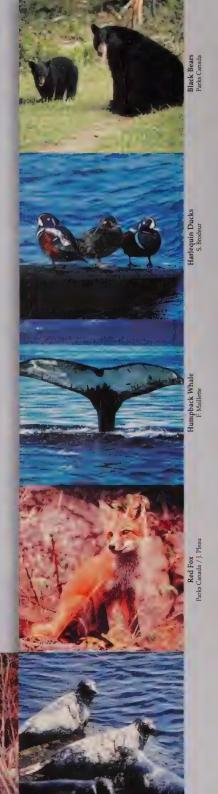

As it tries to find its place in a difficult world, an adolescent bear is highly susceptible to picking up bad habits (like losing its natural fear of people) and getting into trouble (by approaching people for food). A relatively small number of bears survive to maturity in the wild.

If it loses its wildness, it probably won't survive.

"Habituated" bears – bears that have lost their natural fear of humans – almost inevitably become "problem" bears. They actively seek out places where people gather because they have learned that where there are people, there is also food and garbage to eat. Over time, they become increasingly aggressive in their search for an easy meal. Problem bears usually end up having to be removed or destroyed because of the threat they pose to public safety. It is very difficult, and often impossible, to undo habituation. The only real solution is prevention.

You can play a role in preserving the wild character of Forillon National Park by helping us reduce the harmful impact of wildlife disturbance.

Fall, one of Forillon's most beautiful seasons!

Could it be the bracing air, the unrivalled light, the play of colours or the serenity that returns after the busy summer period? Gaspesians will tell you that autumn is a magnificent season and that the cool, generally sunny weather is a standing invitation to a walk in the wild.

Upon arrival at the park, head for the toll kiosk in the North or South Area where you will meet a visitor attendant. This person will give you information about the recreation and interpretation activities provided during the fall period.

Camping

The Des-Rosiers and Petit-Gaspé campgrounds remain open until October 15. The following services are provided to campers: sites with or without individual electrical hook-ups, firewood, service buildings equipped with woodstoves, picnic tables, potable water, washrooms and showers. The laundry facilities at the recreation centre (near Petit-Gaspe campground) can also be used until October 15. We remind you that it is not necessary to book semi-serviced campsites at this time of the year and that park camping and entrance fees are still in effect.

The Petit-Gaspé group campground, open year round, can accommodate groups camping in tents. You can book by phoning (418) 368-5505 or (418) 892-5911 (June 9 to October 8).

Recreation activities

Thale-watching cruises aboard the Narval III continue until the end of the month of September. At least one cruise per day leaves from the Grande-Grave harbour (take note that 8 adults are required for a cruise to take place). The Grande-Grave and Petit-Gaspé sectors are also of interest to scuba divers since they are home to wide variety of algae and animals of all sizes in great numbers. Another service provided in the South Area, the restaurant remains open to visitors at the Recreation Centre until September 16 from 11 am to 4 pm.

Hiking is by far the most popular activity at Forillon in the autumn. A network of nine maintained trails, both short and long, will carry you into the heart of nature where wildlife is now easier to observe. Consult the trail table on page 12 to plan your outings.

Why not take advantage of the lovely fall weather and go on a picnic? Cap-Bon-Ami, Grande-Grave, Fort Péninsule... are perfect places for an unforgettable dîner sur l'herbe.

The Battle of the Restigouche National Historic Site of Canada

A little-known naval battle

During the second half of the 18th century, France and England fought each other on a number of fronts for supremacy over the New World. In July 1760, the British destroyed a French rescue fleet at the mouth of the Restigouche River. More than just a simple military defeat for the French and their Acadian and native Mi'gmaq allies, this event spelled the loss of all hope of saving New France. The Battle of the Restigouche Interpretation Centre brings back to life the odyssey of this supply mission sent from France.

Upon arrival, visitors are charmed by the landscaping and discrete atmosphere of this historic site. At the Interpretation Centre, large pieces of the French ship, Le Machault, and a number of objects found during archeological excavation of the wreck bear witness to the past. Find out about the rescue mission, the ups and downs of this nationally significant battle, the historical context of the time, and the lives of 18th century sailors: all this awaits you at the Battle of the Restigouche National Historic Site.

CENTRE D'INTERPRÉTATION DU CUIVRE

Our door is open!

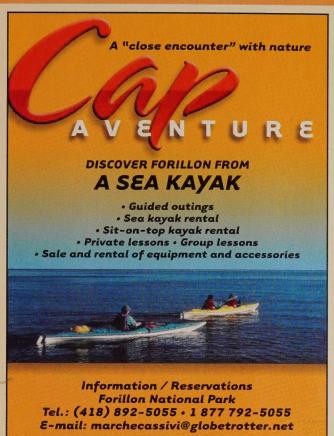

Make the most of your stay on the Gaspé coast by visiting the Gaspé Copper Mine industrial complex, its open-pit mine, smelter, and copper foundry. At the Interpretation Centre explore the underground mine and experience total darkness. Visit the exhibit "Les racines du cuivre" (the origins of copper).

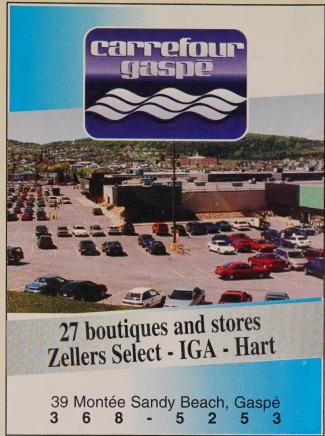

New this year: visit the copperware workshop where copper weather vanes are made.
